

La Lumière

April, 2010

Celle-ci était la véritable lumière, celle qui, en venant dans le monde, éclaire tout être humain.

un LIV'ART PARIS

Art. The word brings to mind plenty of ideas and images. Three words that show up in its definition are skill, beauty, and expression. This summer Dan will be helping with an art project in Paris. Art is ultimately a form of expression. Why not use it to help express the most important message of all, the gospel?! That is the hope of this project, combining art and faith in a city very familiar with art, but that has lost sight of faith. Artists (photographers, sculptors, painters,...) from at least four different countries will collaborate on a project. How does Dan fit into this? Well along with the methodical side that studied engineering, he has an artsy side that begs to get out. You can see glimpses of this in the birthday cakes or wood projects he's done. So when he heard about the Paris Art Project his artsy side leapt for joy. Of course, it was his methodical side that lead the group of artists to ask for his help organizing things. For artists to have the freedom to be creative, it helps to have an organized framework. So that is Dan's challenge, to bring all of this creativity into focus. Please pray for this art project, as there are lots of loose ends to bring together before it starts on June 28th.

deux LIME PAINT AND WILD BOAR

Want to know what a wild boar smells like when it's wet? Pretty much like a wet dog. The paint we're using in our bedroom is lime based (as in limestone, not the color or fruit). Thin yet grainy, we had to buy a special brush made from wild boar hair. And yes, the work is always accompanied by the smell of wet fur. Work on our bedroom came grinding to a halt after Dan seriously hurt his knee back in November. His meniscus torn, it has taken months to be semi functional. But during this spring vacation he hopes to attack not only painting but also installing hardwood floors. During that time May and the boys will be in central France visiting some old castles with our good friends and colleagues, the Skur family.

Please pray...

- for the preparations for the Paris Art Project, that we can funnel all that creativity into something useful for His Kingdom.
- that Dan makes good progress on the bedroom, and that his knee doesn't act up.
